C. Reflection

Based on the outputs, Gemini performed better overall in terms of both design and presentation. One of the main differences I observed was that Gemini applied subtle colors to differentiate each section of the resume, which made it more visually organized and easier to read. In contrast, ChatGPT's output remained plain black and white, which made the resume look more basic and less engaging. Additionally, Gemini structured the sections more clearly, while ChatGPT did not separate them as effectively, making the content feel slightly crowded. To improve the overall quality of the resume, I made a few adjustments on my own, particularly by expanding the skills section. I added more detail about my level of knowledge and experience for each skill, which helped make the resume more informative and reflective of my actual abilities. This small change made a noticeable difference because it gave more depth to the content instead of just listing skills without context. From this activity, I learned that being precise and intentional with your prompt is very important. The way you phrase your instructions directly affects the quality of the output. If the prompt is too general, the results may lack structure, detail, or visual appeal. However, when the prompt is clear and specific, the AI is more likely to generate results that closely match your expectations. Overall, this experience showed me that good prompt design plays a big role in achieving the envisioned outcome.
